COURSE DESCRIPTION

Despite the fact that technology is advancing by leaps and bounds, speech is still one of the most effective means of communication available.

We believe that eloquence should be taught to students from the earliest levels of school education, since they are taught to write, read and think, but rarely are they taught to speak clearly and easily.

It is always important to take care of voice, intonation and timbre, but much more so when we are not face to face because we lose fundamental non-verbal communication, gestures and body language.

This Erasmus course is designed to train educators in advanced public speaking skills and conscious leadership practices in order to improve teaching and educational management.

COURSE INFORMATION

Learning Outcomes

- Use advanced public speaking techniques to speak clearly and persuasively in public.
- Adapt communication style to different educational audiences, including students, colleagues and parents.
- Use non-verbal communication strategies to reinforce the message and capture the audience's attention.
- Incorporate mindfulness and self-awareness practices into daily leadership.
- Manage stress and emotions effectively to improve decision making and conflict resolution in the educational environment.
- Foster an environment of respect and collaboration between students and colleagues.
- Design and implement communication strategies that motivate and engage students in the learning process.
- Develop skills to facilitate group dynamics and collaborative activities in the classroom.
- Continuously evaluate and improve one's own communication and leadership skills through reflection and feedback.
- Establish and maintain positive relationships with students, parents, and colleagues based on empathy and mutual understanding.
- Use coaching techniques to support the personal and academic development of students.
- Create an inclusive and equitable learning environment that values diversity and promotes the well-being of all members of the educational community.
- Develop a personal action plan to apply communication and conscious leadership skills in the educational context.
- Identify opportunities to lead initiatives that improve school culture and classroom climate.
- Evaluate the impact of new practices on the professional performance and educational experience of students.
- Improve communication skills in English and social skills.
- Promote intercultural awareness among educators from different countries.
- Identify and share good practices that can be applied locally.
